

KIDNAPPERS' MOTOR FOUND IN PATERSON

No Trace of Father and Trio Who Took Away Margaret Torrens.

HAVANA TRIP FEARED

Police Watch Piers to Prevent Sailing of Torrens for Parent's Home.

GRANDFATHER AIDS HUNT

James Simpson, Paterson Silk Manufacturer, Tries to Pick Up Trail.

The blue automobile in which Margaret Torrens, 9 months old, was carried away on Thursday from her grandfather's home near Pompton Lakes, N. J., was found yesterday in a garage in Paterson. The searchers have got no trace of the four men, including the baby's father, Alfred Torrens, who swooped down on the baby and made off with her.

The automobile was found by a brother of Torrens in private garage on Thirtieth street, near Seventeenth street, Paterson. It is the garage in which Torrens has been in the habit of lodging his machine when in Paterson, and is not far from his mother's home, 236 Seventeenth street.

The car was left there some time on Friday afternoon or evening, more than twenty-four hours after the kidnapping. Where it had been meanwhile is not known to the authorities, nor have they been able to find out who drove it into the garage, for, not being a public place of storage, there are no attendants.

Bert Miller, Chief of Police of Pompton Lakes, who has been whizzing all over Northern New Jersey in his hunt for the baby snatchers, spent some time in Paterson yesterday afternoon. At a little after 7 o'clock he telephoned to his wife: "The car has been located and I've got to go to another place and shan't be home until late." He and the Paterson police have questioned brothers and sisters of Torrens who live in Paterson, but they swear they haven't seen the father of the baby since the kidnapping and know nothing of his plans or movements.

Steamship Piers Watched.
Piers of two steamships leaving New York for Havana were watched yesterday without yielding a glimpse of Torrens, who, it was suspected, might try to take the little girl to Havana, where his father lives.

Michael Dunn, counsel for James

Simpson, the Paterson silk manufacturer who is the baby's grandfather, is helping the police. He has questioned several persons regarding the kidnapping plot. They said they knew nothing about it.

The strain is telling on the baby's mother, Margaret Simpson Torrens. She cannot believe that a nursing child could be taken from its mother, especially in this hot weather, without injury to its health. She was in such a state on Friday night that a physician was called. She was reported little better yesterday.

The disappearance of Jack and Margaret Woodland, kidnapped in Cape May, N. J., on Thursday, is just as complete as that of the Torrens baby. Every hotel and cottage porch buzzes with speculation. The mother, Mrs. Robert Emmet Woodland, has gone to Chattanooga to see the lawyer who is helping her to sue her husband for divorce in the hope that he may be of assistance in finding the children.

It is pretty certain that Mr. and Mrs. Henry James, who registered as from Richmond, Va., and won the friendship of the Woodland children, went by a boat with a boy and a girl to Lewes, Del., on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Walter Bennett, manager of Sunnyside Villa, where Mr. and Mrs. James had a room, said James told her on Wednesday night that he had not been able to sleep and had been smoking five large packs of cigarettes a day. About 10 o'clock the couple went to their room. In the morning their baggage was gone.

Eyes Mysterious Stranger.
Chief of Police Gibson of Cape May has his eye on a mysterious stranger who has been observed on the beach watching each passing vessel and acting, the chief thinks, as if he were looking for a signal. The chief has an idea that the kidnapers may try to board a steamship bound for South America at the Delaware Breakwater. Pilots have been asked to question any persons answering the descriptions of Mr. and Mrs. James who may be aboard of steamships piloted outward.

The boarding house manager says that Mrs. James got little mail, but received two days before the disappearance of the Woodland children a letter from her mother, who said she was praying each night that her daughter would be converted. The mother, it is said, lives on a farm ten miles from Richmond. The father of James is said to be a minister. The father of Woodland was also a Southern minister. Mrs. Woodland believes that James is a relative of her husband.

PRESERVE COLONIAL CHURCH AND GREEN
St. Paul's Directors of East Chester Incorporate.
Directors of the old St. Paul's Colonial Village Green Association have decided to incorporate the society for the purpose of preserving the old church and its adjoining green which existed at East Chester before the Revolutionary War. On the Fourth of July the association took charge of the celebration, which has been held annually for a hundred years. The green has been restored and a flagpole has been erected on it. It is the intention of the association to erect an iron fence around the flagpole and place a bronze tablet there to mark the spot.

The present directors, who will serve for a year, are Mayor Elmer L. Kincaid of Mount Vernon, Judge Isaac N. Mills of the Appellate Division, Abraham Minnerly, Thomas H. Hodge, Dr. Archibald M. Campbell, Mrs. Joseph S. Wood, Mrs. W. C. Brown, George R. Crawford, Edward O'Brien and F. Oscar Dever. There will be twenty-four directors and a drive will be made for 5,000 members.

BRONX KIDS STRIKE FOR NICKEL SODAS

1,000 Parade Streets and Pick-et Stores Where More Is Charged.

The children's crusade of 1921 started in T-e Bronx yesterday. Its purpose is to compel dispensers of soda water and ice cream to lower their prices. A thousand boys and girls marched from 161st street and Brooks avenue to Borough Hall, leaving pickets at stores regarded as profiteers, waving banners and uttering cries boding no good to the soda man who clings to war time prices while the rest of the world skids to lower levels. They called themselves "strikers for a 5 cent soda."

At Borough Hall they called for Henry Bruckner. He is not only President of The Bronx, but a member of the firm of Bruckner Bros., soda water manufacturers. He was not in. Such placards as these started his secretary, Thomas Dolan, in the face: "President Bruckner, help us cut down soda water prices by reducing your prices!" "Help the kids of The Bronx get nickel sodas!" "Why should we be soaked 500 per cent. profit on sodas?"

Mrs. Anna Grant of 835 Brook avenue, who led the procession of children, addressed Secretary Dolan. She told him the children had to pay 20 and 25 cents a bottle for Bruckner Bros. soda and that the proper price was 10 or 12 cents. Mr. Dolan had his wife about him. He assured the multitude that the Borough President was deeply interested in their effort and everything that could be done would be done to assuage the thirst of this great city at a reasonable rate. He suggested that the children come and see Mr. Bruckner to-morrow morning. That they will do.

Accompanied by Mrs. Grant and Miss

Helen Bode of 423 East 156th street, acting secretary of the soda water strikers, the children paraded down Third avenue. They were prepared to cheer every store which sold ice cream soda at 11 cents, regarded by the strikers as a fair price, but there were only two of these along the route. At stores charging more than 15 cents a halt was made. One of these was the store of Peter Phillips, 4929 Third avenue. His frankness refreshed Mrs. Grant. He told her, she said, that he charged 15 cents for ice cream soda because of an agreement between the confectioners and the ice cream manufacturers' protective association in The Bronx.

"I'll come down if the others do," he said. "We stick together in our organization. I will say, though, that our expenses are tremendous." Assigning five boys to walk up and down in front of Phillips' store with placards, "We want nickel sodas, don't pay high prices," the reformers went on down the avenue. Mrs. Grant interviewed many storekeepers, but they gave her to understand that as individuals they could do nothing. The parade ended at 161st street and Third avenue.

PROSPECTORS SAIL FOR SOUTH AMERICA

Several Parties Bound for Ecuador, Colombia and West Coast Ports.

Several parties of prospectors, bound on trips of exploration in the least known parts of South America, sailed yesterday on the Pacific liner Quillota for Guayaquil, Ecuador, and other west coast ports. In the hold were enough picks and shovels to clean out a coal mine.

One of the parties, composed of E. H. Dawson, I. M. Borja and E. A. Sloven, engineers, are bound for the wilderness of Esmeralda, in the Republic of Colombia, where they hope to locate gold, oil or other minerals. Theron Wesson and Joseph E. Sinclair, another party, planned to look over the mountains of Ecuador on a similar mission.

Also on the liner was Max Schwartz, an adventurous merchant of Guayaquil, who has made several exploring trips among the Jevaros, head hunting Indians of the Andes. Mr. Schwartz came here some time ago to undergo a serious operation to restore the use of his right arm, which was badly fractured last year. His advice to those contemplating a visit to his friends, the Jevaros, is not to try to civilize them. A visitor who minds his own business is safe, but any one who attempts to impose his own particular brand of culture on them loses his head. They are very fond of extracting the bones of their victim's head and then reducing it to a quarter of its original size by a special drying and smoking process over a herb fire.

9 MONTHS DUMB; STORM RESTORES HIS VOICE

Shell Shock Victim Recovers on a Steamship.

MONTREAL, July 9.—C. Lavier of Ogdensburg, N. Y., was able to talk to-day after being dumb for nine months as a result of shell shock received while with the Canadian army. His voice came back to him last night when a thunderstorm shook the steamer Rapids King, on which he was travelling from a Toronto hospital to visit a sister here.

Norlase Dufresne, 60, a farmer near St. Elmer, to-day was suffering from severe internal injuries caused when he was blown from the top of a load of hay by the heavy wind yesterday. The wind blew trees across the lines of the Shawinigan and Cedar Rapids power plant here, and a total of 230,000 volts of electricity was lost to the city. Theatres, residences and office buildings were without lights until a late hour.
